Notes for John McCollum:

"Old John", b. 1657 d. 1760???? John's tombstone lists his age and date of death, so his birth date can be computed to 1656 - 58. Also see David Dobson's "The Original Scots Colonists of Early America" person number 3430 - John McCallum, Covenanter, res. Argyll, transported Aug 1685 fr Leith (Scot) to East, NJ in Henry & Francis. Privy Council Document 11.126. The document stated that he was to be "transported to one of the King's Plantation's abroad, and could not return without the King's permission, under penalty of execution.

Neil,

Here is a response that I received from Dr. David Dobson, author of "The Original Scots Colonists of Colonial America 1612 -1783". He has provided a couple of sources for possible additional information. Let me know what you think about it. I have the book referenced above, but do not have the one Dr. Dobson mentioned in his reply.

Dear Ralph

Many thanks for your letter which arrived here today. I have not looked at this topic for many years but as I recall the voyage was organised by Robert Barclay and the Scots Quakers. The emigration involved three or four vessels in 1685. The Quakers had spare capacity on board so they approached the Privy Council of Scotland which allocated them a number of prisoners then mainly in the tollbooths or jails of Edinburgh. Many of these prisoners were Covenanters, ie militant Presbyterians, though there were a few criminals among them. I erroneously described John as a Covenanter.

John participated in Argyll's rebellion against the Stuart monarchy and their policies, so he may have been sympathetic to the Covenanters but he was actually a rebel under the Earl of Argyll. Barclay would have been granted land in proportion to the number of immigrants he brought to NJ. The records for this lie in the NJ State Archives in Trenton. It is unlikely that there was a passenger list. It is possible that the Duke of Argyll's archive in Inveraray may hold reference to those who fought for the Earl in his unsuccessful rebellion. Another person that you could contact would be Ned Landsman who is a historian at a university in NY state, who has written on the Scots in East New Jersey, regrettably I do not have his address or e-mail.

My 'Scottish Emigration to Colonial America, 1607-1783' [University of Georgia Press, 1994, 2004], would provide you with an overview of the New Jersey settlement and put his emigration into context.

Hello Neil,

Thanks for the note on David Dobson's comments. I have previously sent you the names from the 9th Earl's lists, his followers who were declared rebels and taken prisoner after the failure of the rising in 1685.

The names don't quite tie in with the MacCallums who were tried and convicted as rebels in the Register of the Privy Council of Scotland (RPCS) minutes. In Volume XI, covering the years 1685-6, a total of six MacCallums were tried and transported: 2 Duncans, 2 Neils, 1 Archibald, and 1 John.

John McCallum in "Glasfort" (probably Glassary Parish) made a declaration that he was bound and taken away by Mr Charles Campbell (the earl's son) and that he never lifted arms against the king, and that he was no rebel. However, it was alledged that he was seen "with Argyle". As Dobson says in his volume, John was banished in a trial held on the 30th July 1685, and appears in the RPCS minutes among a list of 24 names handed over to Robert Barclay of Urie the following day to be transported from the port of Leith to New Jersey. Dobson says in his book that he had been held in the Edinburgh Tolbooth pending trial and transportation, but the RPCS minutes say he was held in Pauls Hospital, or Paul's Work, evidently a secure workhouse where unfortunates were imprisoned and make to work under hard labour.

The official Malcolm of Poltalloch family tree, on the other hand, (as detailed in Burkes "Landed Gentry") has John MacCallum, son of Zachary mor MacCallum of Poltalloch, as John MacCallum of Knockalva, a farm in Glassary at the top of Kilmichael glen (now a ruin). When his elder brother resigned Poltalloch to their uncle, John, who had married Margaret MacEwan in 1681, likewise resigned Knockalva to the uncle "and went to Ireland"..
